Hongkong, April 16th, 1387. THERE seems at length to be a fair prospect of the navigation of the Upper Yangisze being attempted by a steamer. A company has been formed in London for the purpose, a prospectus of which has been forwarded to us. The Upper Yangteze Steam Navigation Company, Limited, bas a capital of £10,000 divided into 100 eleven o'clock, on board the British barque Manshares of £100 each. The defendant had pleaded the Statute of Limitatious, but he withdrew this defence, and offered to pay the amount claimed if plaintiff would accept it in instalments of $5 a month. This offer was accepted by the plaintiff. His Lordship gave judgment for the plaintiff accordingly. He told the defendant it was a case which he should not have allowed to come into court, that he had no defence whatever, and that he should have settled the claim privately.

The qualifications necessary for admission to the Sanitarium would be sickness and straitened circumstances, a man's richness or poverty not being estimated so much on what his income is as on what he has to do with it. It, would be open to all nationalities The boxes were then opened by Inspector except, and for the reason I have given elsewhere, the Chinese. A rent would be charged on a scale carefully graduated to suit the means and requirements of the patient; and the quality of the lodging occupied might to some extent be in keeping with the rent charged. The committee would retain in its hands the power to dismiss as well as to admit, so that no case of little urgency could be able to keep out one of greater gravity. In the event of any of the rooms being un-

Of course a higher and fixed rent would be charged in this case; and, doubtless, something towards the up-keep and possible extension of the Sanitarium could be obtained from this source. It has been suggested that the projected Peak hotel, and the lodging houses that are sure to be erected on the completion of the Peak tramway, will provide for the cases the Sanitarium is intended for. I do not think so. An hotel, in the first place, is expensive, and in the second place an hotel keeper would not care about his ordinary and healthy customers being disturbed by the whining of sick children. A lodging house rent would certainly be high, and I do not suppose such a place could be had when wanted for a short time. As a first step towards carrying out this scheme, should it be determined on as the form the Jubilee commemoration is to take, I would suggest the election of a committee of influential and practical men, who have the confidence of oumstances and requirements of all classes. would suggest that it should include among its other nationalities as well as English. The mode of dealing with the results of the year's working was in the opinion of the directors the only safe one, especially as theirs was a new Company, and he hoped it would meet with the approval of the sharsholders. They proposed to divide $17,000.61, the amount carried orward from the 1835 account, (being the net profits of that year) among the shareholders as interest from the commencement of the Company to the end of 1885, and to carry forward to the next account the balances of $57,876.78 on the Fire, and $2,520.24 on the Marine working accounts. This would in reality be tantamount to a dividend of about 72 per cent on the working business of the Company: The report presented to the shareholders was so full that he did not believe he could add anything to it for the information of the shareholders. He was happy to say that their business during the year 1836 was prosperous. Of course they could not, in these times, expect it to improve by leaps and bounds, but they would see on comparison with the previous year's accounts that it had improved by good, steady progress, an improvement tend to propose the following resolution at the amounting to about £4,000. The Bill, which the members for the City of London have introduced providing for an inquiry by the coroner into the causes of fires which have been unattended by fatal consequences, responds, says the Globe, to a demand which has been rather urgently pressed of late. The frequency of fires which are never satisfactorily accounted for demands investigation by official authority. In reference to "Ruddigore," the notice of the change in the spelling of the word has reached the United States. It has, it is said, improved the appearance of the objectionable title in cold print, but common people, who do not move in the most exclusive set, might imagine that the pronunciation remained the same. Society decreed otherwise. According to the London correspondent of the New York Herald, the proper caper just now is to pronounce the name as though it were spelled "Roo-Diggery," with the accent on the "dig." In a kindly spirit the New York Dramatic News warns those Anglomaniacs who might contemplate emulating the example set in this matter that there is an organisation being formed to cover with the rud-diest kind of gore any man convicted of calling the work "Roc-Diggery."

A case of some importance to newspaper proprietors was decided in the Supreme Court Brisbane, on the 15th March, Frederick Foulkes Swanwich sued Charles Mills, printer and publisher of the Brisbane Telegraph, for the recovery of £50 penalty for publishing the following advertisement:-"Lost, black and tan terrier pup. Finder handsomely re-warded. No questions asked." The actionwas brought under the Larceny Act, which provides that whoseever shall publicly advertise a reward for the return of any lost or stolen property, and use any words purporting that no questions will be asked, or shall print or publish such advertisement, shall forfeit £50 for every such offence to any person sucing for same. The jury, by direction of the Chief Justice, returned a verdict for plaintiff for £50 and costs. In the second action for printing the same advertisement, a similar judgment was given.

The idea that the Goans, as a people, are all of mixed blood, is entirely erroneous, and was first propagated by historians badly informed and afterwards repeated by those who ought to have known better. The descendants of Europeans form a distinct class in Gos, and in the middle of the last century numbered about 1,500; however, owing to emigration and other causes their number now does not exceed 700 or 800. The mass of Gozna are purely Indian, and although a Christian people they still have their castes, which, however, in no way interferes with re-ligion, but simply marks their individual descent, and determines in a manner their social position; indeed, their castes (as Christians) may be likened to the different classes in European society; for instance, if a Goa Brahmin marries a lady of inferior caste (or social position) he is said to have contracted a mesalliance, and Everybody knows it is quite a common thing for a big steamer to go through the Suez Canal at night. But what is, perhaps, not so generally known is that the steamer itself, and not the Bues Canal Company, which has to supply the requisite electric light apparatus for the nocturnal passage. What the company does is to prescribe the amount of illuminating power which the apparatus must possess. For instance, no steamer is allowed to start on a night transit that is not fitted with an "electric projector" which is capable of throwing a light for at least 1,200 metres shead. And on the upper deck, too, there must be an electric lamp and shade powerful enough to light up a circular area some 600 metres in circumference. Big steamers are beginning to carry this apparatus, but there is a company both at Port Said and Port Tewfik which lets out the necessary projectors and lamps on hire. Provided with this apparatus all is comparatively plain sailing, or rather steaming, save when a dredger is eighted, and as the dredgers work principally by night this is no rare occurrence. On such a thing happening a very picturesque discharge of fireworks takes place; for the steamer is expected to send up three rockets in succession, or even more, in case the dredger fails to send up a rocket in response. The effect on a pitch-dark night, according to a friend of mine who has lately made the nocturnal transit, says Figure, is supremely beautiful, and what with the brilliant electric lights, the hissing rockets, and the red and green and white lights which are used for signalling, the scene is most fairly-like, the sudden way in which the electric lamps are extinguished and re-illuminated being especially effective.
